A LITTLE GIRL SUMMONED.

MR. CROSCUP'S ELEVEN-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER MUST GO TO COURT.

A Hall Boy in the Apartment House Where She Lives Says That She Struck Him with Roller Skates, and, Later, with Books, lajuring His Knee Permanently.

Frank Evertson, a pale-faced, delicate-looking lad of fifteen, with his left knee enclosed in a plaster cast, appeared before Magistrate Wentworth in Yorkville Police Court yesterday and asked that a summons be issued for Margaret Croscup, 11 years old, the daughter of George E. Croscup, senior member of the publishing firm of Croscup & Co. of 66 Fifth avenue. The lad charged the girl with assaulting him in such a manner that he may be a cripple for life. In court with the boy were his grandmother, Mrs. Rachel Evertson, and Charles W. Baich, a stangerapher, who represented Lawyer Warren Burt of 99 Nassau street, the boy's attorney. Mr. and Mrs. Croscop and their two little daughters, of whom Margaret is the elder, live on the second floor of the large apartment house at 168 and 170 West Eighty-first street. Frank Evertson lives with his grandmother on the first floor of the tenement at 145 West Sixtieth

On July 21 Frank became the hall boy of the house where the Croscups live. The Croscups were then in the country. They returned to town the latter part of August, in order that Margaret and her sister might be ready to attend school when school should open early in September.

One morning, not long after the Croscups returned, Margaret came down stairs with a pair of roller skates in her hand. When she approached the street door, Frank says that he spened it for her and that, as she went out, she purposely hit him with the skates, just below the knee cap. The boy says there was no reason for the alleged assault, as neither of the children exchanged a word and, up to that time, s the boy says, he had never spoken to the girl, her sister, or any member of her family.

He was compelled to limp all the rest of the day and for many days afterward. The knee continued to bother him, and he continued to limp. One night, when he went home, his grandmother asked him what was the matter. Fearing that if he told the truth his grandmother might make a complaint, and thus he might lose his place, he said that he guessed he must have hurt it in some way. Mrs. Evertson, however, being a woman of quick intuition, dirined what the trouble was at once.

You've got the rheumatism, Frankle," she said. "Rheumatism in summer is awful. You must have your knee rubbed with liniment and tied up with red flannel. That's what they used for rheumatism when I was a girl, and its Frank had his own notions about liniment and red fiannel being good for what alled him but he submitted to his grandmother's treat-ment, and continued to grow worse instead of better. Mrs. Evertson noticed this after a time "It does beat me, Frankie, that your rheumatism grows no better. I believe that lini-ment was half water. I'll go this minute and Around to the anothecary's she went and hit me over the knee with a pair of skates a long white ago, and that's what's made me lame. Teday she bit me in the same place with a bundle of schoolbooks, and now I can't walk. I didn't want to tell you about it at first, 'cause I was 'fraid you'd tell and I'd loss my job.'

When Mrs. Evertson neard this she couldn't understand it all at first, but gradually, by means of a good deal of questioning on her part and a good deal of explaining on the part of the boy, the old woman became convinced that it was a surgeon that her grandson had needed all along instead of lotions and drugs. Then she sent for a physician she knew, Dr. Joseph Kalisher of 239 East Seventy-second street. Dr. Kalisher canne, examined the boy's knee, and said that the lower end of the kneecap had been fractured, and that the lad should have had medical attendance long before, in fact, when he was hurt the first time. For the time being, he said, the only thing to do was to do up the knee in splints.

This was done snd the boy was put to bed. Then Frank's mother was sent for. She is Mrs. George Vincent, and she lives at 138 West Sixtieth street. Frank Evertson's father died many years ago, and when his mother married a second time, the boy, who had been known by his real name of Frank Reilly, went to live with his grandmother and took her name. When Mrs. Vincent learned what was the matter with her son she asked him if he had given the little Croscup girl any provocation.

"Why, no," was the boy's reply. "I never his grandmother and took her name. When Mrs. Vincent learned what was the matter with her son she asked him if he had given the little Croscup giri any provocation.

"Why, no," was the boy's reply, "I never done nothin' to her and never said nothin'. A day or two before she hit me the irrst time, she left her skates in the hall and then she called to me from the head of the stairs:

"Hall boy! Hall boy! Bring me my skates. They're too heavy for me to carry."

"I wasn't allowed to leave the door, so I didn't answer her. Then, another time, she came down into the hall not pushed all the bells on the bell board, 'nd I told the janitor. That's what I was told to do, 'nd I done it. The first time she hit me I was openin' th' door for her, 'nd she swung the skates 'round on purpose. The second time she was comin' in, and when I got the door open she hit me with the books."

On hearing this story Mrs. Vincent went to see Mr. Croscup. It was from her that the latter first heard that Frank had been seriously injured. He expressed his sympathy, and told Mrs. Vincent that he would call on Frank. He did so, Mrs. Croscup going with him. When the Croscups called Mrs. Evertson, in answer to questions, let it be known that she could ill afford to pay doctors' bills, in addition to having her grandson idle. Mr. Croscup asked what she thought the total expense of the boy,s illness would be, judning from what Dr. Kallsher had said. Mrs. Evertson thought a moment, and then said that $25 would be enough. Mr. Croscup gave the woman this amount, telling her that he did it simply because he was sorry for her and her grand-child. After he turned over the money he drew up a receipt, which he worded like this:
"Received of George E. Croscup twenty-five ($25) dollars in full for claim on account of niury to Frank."

This receipt Mrs. Evertson signed, and Mr. Croscup now holds it. The boy kopt growing worse, and finally, Dr. Kallsher said that the boy was falling into a rapid decline; that the knee had become diseased; that his whole syste ration would cost $50, and that he would bring a skilled surgeon to perform it, providing Mr. Croscup would guarantee the payment of the bill.

a skilled surgeon to perform it, providing Mr. Croscup would guarantee the payment of the bill.

Mrs. Vincent went to Mr. Croscup with the physician's statement, and asked him to foot the bill. According to the story of the young woman who accompanied Mrs. Vincent on this call upon Mr. Croscup, Croscup said:

"To you think I am legally responsible for Frank's injury? If you do, I don't. What money I did give you was given only because I felt sorry for the bey. Now that you make this demand for more money. I must decline to do anything more in the matter."

With that the interview ended. Then Mrs. Vincent consulted a lawyer, and, upon his advice, the application for the summons was made Magistrate Wentworth issued the summons, made it returnable to-day, and Mrs. Vincent served it on little Margaret in person, catching her in the hall of the house where the Croscups live yesterday afternoon. The hearing of the case will go on this morang.

struck his knee, because on setting up he rubbed it and acted as if he were in pain.

There were no witnesses to the alleged assaults, and, as the case stands now, it would appear that the word of the one child is as good as that of the other. Mr. and Mrs. Croscup do not hesitate to say that the whole case is one of blackmail. In support of their contention they set forth that the operation that Dr. Kalisher is said to have insisted upon in order that the boy's life inight be saved was not performed, and that the only thing that was done was to encase the boy's knee in a plaster cast.

This is true. The boy is able to limp about the house now with his knee in a cast, but he is manifestly far from well. There were plenty of persons yesterday who were willing to testify that Frank Everston was astrong healthy boy until he went to work in the house where he says he was injured. Now his eyes are sunken, his face has not a trace of color in it, he is very thin, and he has a dry, hacking cough. His knee causes him pain with every step he takes. He was doubtless injured in some way. Perhaps to-day's proceedings in court will bring out the cause and manner of the injury.

BURNED TO THE WATER'S EDGE.

The Pennsylvania Ferryboat New Brunswick Completely Destroyed by Fire. The Pennsylvania Railroad ferryboat New early yesterday morning and her hull and machinery are now lying under water near Bed-Around to the anothecary's she went and accused him of selling diluted liniment.

"The liniment is perfectly pure, Aira. Evertson," protested the druggist, "but rheumatism, rou must remember, is a disease of the blood. In order to get at the seat of the trouble you must cleanse the blood. Now I have an excellent blood purifier. Better try a bottle,"
"I believe I will try it. Are you sure it's good?" asked Mrs. Evertson.
"Firest thing in the world," answered the druggist, as he did up the blood purifier.
For another two weeks Frank Evertson was obliged to take blood purifier religiously, while his lameness increased and he grew weaker day by day. He got so bad finally that, he says, he had to crawl up stairson his hands and knees in order to deliver the mail to the tenants. His grandmother kept insisting that he would be all right when his blood got cleansed, and that's what the medicine was doing. The druggist bad told her so, and the druggist ought to bow. At length the old woman began rather loss faith in the blood purifier herself, and he morning she said to her grandson:
"Frankie, what you need is physic. To-morrow morning you must take seme Rochelle salts."
But Frankie was saved that much by somelow's Island. The boat was laid up on Satur-

But Frankie was saved that much by something that happened, he says, one afternoon early in October. He went to work as usual in the morning, and when he came home at night a strange man came with him. When the car stopped at the corner of the street, the boy was too lame and too weak to get off without help and a passenger volunteered to assist him off the car and up the one flight of stairs to his home. When ne got inside the little rear flat his grandmother exclaimed:

"Why, what's the matter, Frankie?"

The little fellow burst out crying, but finally pulled himself together and said:
"Oh, Grandma! I ain't got no rheumatism, and never did have. Mrs. Croscup's little girl hit me over the knee with a pair of skates along while ago, and that's what's made melame. Teasy she bit me in the same place with a bundle of schoolbooks, and now I can't walk. I didn't gineer Denmead sent out a second alarm, and that brought all the fire companies in the lower part of the city to the ferry. There was sufficient lire extinguishing apparatus on hand to extinguish a vocano, but it could not get near enough to the boat to do effective work.

The fire spread rapidly to the upper woodwork of the boat in spite of the twenty or more streams which were being poured upon it from the river and land sides. As the flames were getting in dangerous proximity to the woodwork of the ferry house, the boat was pulled out into the stream by two of the Pennsylvania tugs. The cabins on the lower and upper decks were all abiaze, and as she drifted down with the tide she presented a grand spectacle. The company's tugs and the other tugs, which had come to their assistance, hovered about the burning boat and escorted her down the stream until she was beached near Bedlow's, there was nothing left of the superstructure, and it is probable that the engine and machinery have been ruined.

The boat was valued at $120,000 and was insured. She was partly destroyed by fire in April, 1889, and was then made a double decker. Her loss will not cripple the ferry service, as the company has just received the St. Louis, a new double decker from the Cramos' yard, and another one, the Pittsburgh, is nearly compisted. The origin of the fire is not known, but super-intendent Bloomsburg will make an investigation.

A Rot Discussion Over the Offending Paragraph in the Report Declining to Take Under the Presbytery's Care Mr Warszawiak of the Jewish Missies

The New York Presbytery spent yesterday fternoon in an attempt to set themselves right with the Jews. On Dec. 14 the Presbytery declined to receive into its care Herman Warszawiak and the mission to apostate Hebrews conducted by him. The declination was based upon the recommendations of a commit tee appointed to look into Mr. Warszawiak's affairs. That committee reported that they found two reasons for not taking Mr. Warszawiak into the church at once. First, they said, he was unwilling to submit himself properly to the Presbytery, and second, there were allegations against his moral character that, if properly founded, made him unfit to be received. In commenting upon this last assertion, the committee reported:

All must admit that there is ground for charitable judgment in this instance, in view of the education, associations, and general environment of one born of Jewish parents and largely removed, the greater part of his life, from the restraining and correcting in uences of the Gospel of Christ.

There was a party in the Presbytery, headed by Dr. D. G. Wylie, who favored Mr. Warsza-wiak, and who felt that the committee had cone out of its way to malign him and the Jewish race. They entered a protest against the paragraph quoted above, and demanded a meeting pro re nata to consider it. The special meeting began venterday after noon at 3 o'clock. Before "constituting" the Presbytery, the Rev. James Chambers, Moderator, announced that all discussion and action must be limited to the paragraph mentioned in the call.

Dr. J. R. Davies moved that in view of the possible unpleasant nature of the discussion, and what he called the habitual inaccuracy and perversity of the press, the Presbytery "sit by themselves," or in other words, that reporters be excluded from the room. Dr. Wylfe, Dr. Mullaly, and others said that Dr. Davies was most unjust to the press; that while newspaper accounts of the last meeting might not have been pleasant reading, they were accurate; that the injury to be undone had been a public injury, and that the undoing should be equally public. By a close vote it was decided to allow reporters to remain.

A long technical argument followed on the available methods of acting on the offensive paragraph. Dr. Hoadley, the stated clerk. said that the report of the Warszawiak com-mittee was part of the minutes of the previous meeting because it had been filed in the minute book along with the record of an unsuccessful motion to expunge from the report everything relating to Mr. Warszawiak's noral character. Other members of the Pres moral character. Other members of the Freshytery insisted that the Presbytery was not at all responsible for the unplessant paragraph; it was the utterance of a committee of whose work the Presbytery approved, but whose language and recommendations were in no sense directly representative of the centiment of the committee. In the course of this somewhat intricate discussion, which prepared the way for the complications which followed, i.r., Wylles said: lie said:
"But the moderator said that the report was

"But the moderator said that the report was filed with the minutes."

"The Moderator," Dr. Chambers broke in sharply, "did not say any such thing. The stated cierk said semething of the sort."

"Dear friend," said Dr. Wylle sweetly, "I beg your parden, but I said 'the stated clerk'; you said moderator." you said moderator."
"Dear friend," said Dr. Chambers, "I beg vironment of a Polish Jew, with all the disadvantages blaced upon him by the unfavorable influence of the existing Romish Church. The Jew there is an object of mere sufferance. Why not soften our indictment by explaining these things? But as our action has been misunderstood by our Jewish friends I wish to offer this paper.

Dr. Sample then read a long resolution explaining that the Presbytery did not mean to say anything derovatory to dudaism, that ended by insisting that the Presbytery still held that the Jewish religion could not possibly be as morally uplifting as the doctrine of the Christian Church. When he had finished reading Prof. Brown arose and said:

"While I am gratified with the tone and dignity of Dr. Sample's paper, I have brepared a paper that I think avoids some of the infelicities of expression there contained. It reads:

"Whereas, The action of the Presbytery has been in some quarters mistakenly understoodlas reflecting upon the morality, inculcated by the Jewish religion.

"Resolved, That the Presbytery hereby ex-of expression there contained. It reads:

"Whereas. The action of the Fresbytery has been in some quarters mistakenly understoodas reflecting upon the morality inculcated by the Jewish religion.

"Resolved, That the Presbytery hereby expressly_disavows responsibility for the language of the rreport in the case of Mr. Warszawiak, excepting as to the recommendations which the Presbytery has adopted by vote.

"Resolved, That the Presbytery sincerely regrets that any should have been led to suppose that it intended to cast a siur upon Jewish morality, or to treat elightingly those with whom it cordially agrees in accepting the divine authority of the Hebrew scriptures and the high standard of personal character therein proclaimed and exemptified."

Dr. McCracken—I desire to express by approbation of the amendment offered by Prof. Brown. There is a time for all things. The time to retract an inadvertence is not the time to preach the Gospel.

Dr. Van Dyke spoke in favor of the substitute, because, he said, it was terse, to the point, and incontroversial. As Prof. Brown and suggested, the case was analagous to a misunderstanding between gentlemen. One had been misinterpreted, and wished immediately to withdraw the offending words.

Various members of the Presbytery supported one resolution or the other, several felt that it was only due to the "faithful and self-sacrificing committee" to accept their resolutions. This was only due to the "faithful and self-sacrificing committee" to accept their committee, some one said, whereupon rose murmurs of "It ought to be," "Serves em right," Dr. Mullaly wanted both resolutions read again. It was suggested that the words "intended to" be taken out of Prof. Brown's resolutions," said the Moderator.

"I suggest that the effect of a slight to the "whereas" when he had finished, the Moderator said: "I meant, of course, the 'whereas' clause."

The Cerk immediately read the resolutions through, leaving out only the single word "whereas." When he had finished, the Moderator acid. "I m ator said: I meant, of course, the whereas clause."

The Rev. Mr. Davies could not bear to give up the expressed conviction that the Christian religion was superior in its moral influence to that of the Jews. That expression of conviction was very dear to many members of the Presbytery, he said. He also did not feel like repudiating a faithful and well-meaning committee.

Presbytery, he said. He also did not feel like resudiating a faithful and well-meaning committee.

"Deal gently with the Hebrews," said Dr. Sample plaintively, "as you will; the committee will hear with your action,"

"The Presbytery will bear with me," said Dr. John Hall. "I may be out of order, but is nothing to be done about the base reflections upon Mr. Warszawiak's character contained in this report? We have greatly minued him, on the testimony of those whose religion he has forsaken testimony which I know to be false. Yet, instead of righting him, we are apologiciling for some slight to other people who were brought into an attempt to ameliorate the force of his indictinent. Is it the manly the Christian way, this one we are following?

Dr. Wylie and others of the Warszawiak party were up in a chuncor of endorsement. The Moderator said that the meating was not called to discuss Mr. Warszawiak, Dr. Hall. Dr. Wylie, and the rest varied the whole mater to go over until the last meeting of the Presbytery. Some one moved to lay but the Presbylery. Some one moved to har both re-tions on the table. Some lody suggested a simple resolution without comment, expunsing the offensive paragraph from the minutes. Dr. Hall said that he wanted nothing to do with a resolution that put Christianity on a moral equality with Judaism.

"If we ever show disrespect to Christianity." we ever show disrespect to Christianity,"

"If we ever show disrespect to Christianity," said Prof. Brown, "it will not be by honoring the race from which Christ came."

Dr. Chapin said that he wanted to go on record as saying that from his wide experience among Jews he asserted that their family life and dis inline were far superior to that to be found in Christian families: Jewish children had more respect for their parents, were more obedient, and were more industrious.

Dr. Bliss tried to well the two resolutions to superior was constant. Dr. Bliss tried to weld the two resolutions together. Suggestion after suggestion was embodied. With every suggestion a member of the Presbyter; rose and made for the door. At about hair past 5 the previous question was ordered. All substitutes and amendments were voted down in rapid succession until Prof. Brown's resolutions were reached. They were passed by a vote of 34 to 20.

The Presbytery adjourned in the middle of talk of a protest against the action of the programment of the programment.

FORTY-THREE HOMES BURNED.

So Many Families Driven Out in the Cold Yesterday Morsing.

Forty-three families were rendered homeless esterday morning by a fire which started in the apartment house at 230 West Fifteenth street. The flames quickly spread to 241, next door, and both buildings were completely gutted. It was bitterly cold at the time, the thermome-ter registering about 10° above zero, and the suffering of the homeless, half-dead people was intense. All of them escaped serious injury, a fact which was due to the celerity with which they were awakened and routed out by the police and the janitors of the two tenements. The rained buildings were five-story apart-

"Dear friend," said Dr. Chambers, "I beg your pardon."

Thereupon the discussion resumed its fitting tone of harmony. Frof. Brown rose to say that he had supposed that a set of resolutions would be ready for the Presbytery to consiler, but as none had been offered he would like to present some he had prepared.

Dr. R. F. Sample, Chairman of the late Warszawiak committee, cut off Prof. Brown's resolutions by remarking with some intensity that a set of resolutions had been prepared and as soon as it appeared how they might advantageously be introduced he would do so.

Dr. McCracken said that the great thing seemed to be to expunge the objectionable words from the minutes. How, he asked; should it be done.

The Moderator—That is for you to determine.

Dr. Sample, Leffer this paper, which has The Moderator—That is for you to determine.

Dr. Sample—I offer this paper, which has been prepared with the utmost care, so that the varying moods in which the brethren meet the question may find in it a united sentiment as to question may find in it a united sentiment as to the real point at issue. Before effering it I vish to explain. In being one of the committee to examine into Mr. Warszawiak's affairs, I acted under constraint I begged to be exceed. Falling that, I tried to do my duty wrote the report. I tried, in writing it, to do a kind thing. We had to recognize certain assertions adverse to Mr. Warszawiak's and it seemed meet to me to introduce the phrase. Here was a man bern in Warsaw with the environment of a Polish Jew, with all the disadvantages blaced upon him by the unfavorable vantages blaced upon him presched the the fire escape, and caught it. Then he told the persons above to climb over his shoulders, and in this manner many of them reached the ground.

The rear of the building was also provided with fire escapes, and a large number of the tenants took advantage of them. There were several narrow escapes, some of the tenants having to be carried out in a fainting consition. Policemen Howard and Gayner of the West Twentieth street station saw the blaze from Seventh avenue, and they now joined in the work of rescue. The flames began to cat their way through the airshaft into 241, but the tenants of that building were alarmed in time to avail themselves of the stairways.

When the firemen came it was too late to save the two tenements, and they devoted themrelves to trying to save the adjoining property. Chief Cook took charge and found it necessary to turn in a second and third alarm. Nearly all the hydrants were frozen up and considerable delay ensued before streams of water could be thrown upon the flames. The cold froze the spray, coating the firemen lice. It was thought prudent to turn the people out of 243, and another band of unfortunates was added to those already in the streets and neighboring houses. The flames were stayed, however, before doing any damage to 243, and most of the evicted tenants went back yesterday morning, but to water-scaked apartments. The fire was out by 5 o'clock.

The only accident occurred to two liremen. Hosemen Robinson and level of 10 Engling hundred to the food when a heavy drain pipe fell down from the roof. It struck Robinson on the left foot, severing four of his toes. Dettel was struck by falling timbers and severely bruised. They were removed to the New York Hospital. The burned buildings were examined by the building inspectors esterilay, and the walls were found to be in some danger of falling. Those of the airshafts were torn down late in the afternoon. The houses were built a year ago, and were modern in all their furnishings. They were bought about two months ago by Gerson
